BROOKLYN, N.Y. – June 3, 2024 – HITN, the leading Spanish-language public media network, transformed its main studios into an impressive competitive arena to host the CONDUIT Esports tournament.

On the first Saturday of June, five public schools from each borough of New York City gathered at HITN's facilities to participate in a day of competition and vie for the title of champions of the 2024 CONDUIT Cup.

The school campuses that competed in this cyber sports event brought approximately 108 participants. The school that emerged victorious was Queens I.S. 230; second place was taken by a student from Queens, and third place was won by TAPCo School from the Bronx.

CONDUIT is a HITN initiative aimed at promoting esports among public school students in the city, aligning with the network's mission to educate and entertain Hispanic audiences in the United States.

Additionally, CONDUIT provides an alternative for these students to access the necessary materials and equipment for participating in esports competitions.
